Boschini: TCU monitoring travel bans

By MADALYN SHIRCLIFF
STAFF WRITER

TCU is monitoring the campus impact of President Donald Trump's executive order, which banned travel from seven Middle Eastern countries.

"Texas Christian University has a longstanding history of encouraging global awareness and cultural understanding – with programs designed to advance knowledge, broaden perspectives and make a positive and sustainable difference in the world," Chancellor Victor Boschini said in an email Tuesday. "We recognize the value of our international students, faculty and staff in bringing those aspirations to life. Much is yet to be learned about the full reach and impact of these federal changes, and TCU's goal, as always, is to act with the best interests of our campus community in mind."

The email included resources for those in the TCU community affected by the ban, including TCU International Services for students and Human Resources for faculty and staff.

that have responded to the travel ban. The American Association of Universities issued a statement Monday that recognized the need for national security, but urged the administration to lift the ban as soon as possible.

TCU faculty and staff are also planning a march "in solidarity" of those affected by the ban that will take place on Thursday.

TCU hosts six students from Iran, Somalia and Sudan: Three of the seven countries listed in President Trump's travel ban, according to the 2016 TCU Fact Book.

The order sparked protests nationwide and abroad after it was announced that the government had suspended travel from Iraq, Syria, Iran, Libya, Somalia, Sudan and Yemen.

Amal Khan, a junior biology major and co-president of TCU's Muslim Student Association, questioned if the move was legal.

"I was shocked that it was implemented at all since it's illegal," he said. "Banning people based solely on religion is discriminatory and un-American. I can't imagine the pain and suffering so many families are going through right now."

in the order as the reason for the ban. Former mayor of New York Rudy Giuliani spoke on FOX News defending the rationale of the order as focusing on "areas of the world that create danger for us."

The order bans travelers coming from these countries until the Secretary of Homeland Security, the State Department, and the Director of National Intelligence determine that they are not a threat to the United States. The order says the visa-issuance process "plays a crucial role" in giving out whether these people have ties to terrorism.

Trump cited the 9/11 attacks as a disaster caused by poor vetting.

"Perhaps in no instance was that more apparent than the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, when State Department policy prevented consular officers from properly scrutinizing the visa applications of several of the 19 foreign nationals who went on to murder nearly 3,000 Americans," the president wrote.

None of the hijackers in the attacks, however, originated from countries listed in the travel ban.

Greg Carr, a junior nutrition sciences major and members of the Islamic Association of Tarrant County, thinks the Trump administration needs to adjust its focus.

"There is not a single fatal terrorist attack in the U.S. by an immigrant from those seven countries," Carr said. "Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, the UAE, and Egypt are exempt, yet these are the countries where the 9/11 hijackers were from. The intention seems to be more about pandering to an irrational fear of terrorism."

A march is planned for noon today. Demonstrators expect to gather in front of Founder's Statue.

Professor Hanan Hammad, who organized the march, said it is meant to show solidarity with international students, minority communities, reject discrimination and to "demand policies that are compassionate towards the weak and the disadvantaged; towards the refugees."

CRES speaker emphasizes importance of diversity on college campuses

By RYDER BUTTRY
STAFF WRITER

Promoting interactions between a diverse student body is one of the biggest issues universities face when it comes to diversity because students come ill-equipped to engage in these discussions, a leading scholar on race and ethnicity told a TCU audience Tuesday night.

Dr. Albert Camarillo, the founding director of the Center for Comparative Studies in Race and Ethnicity at Stanford, was the keynote speaker for the debut of the Comparative Race and Ethnic Studies (CRES) Program.

"We still are segregated residentially for the most part, so when you pour people from diverse backgrounds onto a college campus, they don't have these skills," he said.

Camarillo is recognized as a founding scholar in Mexican-American history and Chicano studies. His lecture, "Why Diversity Matters: Farther to Go," contextualized the history of diversity and defined it as a celebration of diversity in a democratic society.

"We'll be better Americans for [being functionally diverse], we'll be a better society for it..." Camarillo said. "Maybe there will be less division in America, maybe we'll get closer to being that society that has greater unity."

His campus visit, which included classroom conversation and a lunch with faculty, was hosted by CRES along with support from the Addran College of Liberal Arts, John V. Roach Honors College, Center for Public Education and Women & Gender Studies.

CRES will offer a major, minor or emphasis in comparative race and ethnic studies come fall.

Assistant Professor of History and CRES board member Max Krochmal and Associate Professor of Religion and Ethics Melanie Harris met Camarillo when they visited California to explore curriculums for a CRES program.

Camarillo said the center at Stanford was started after student protests sparked interest in ethnic studies at the same time faculty were discussing comparative ethnic studies programs.

Similarly, student interest in more classes focused on subjects related to race and culture prompted Krochmal to look into CRES curriculums for TCU's campus.

Students and faculty gathered in the BLUU for Camarillo's lecture.

He said Camarillo was invited with the hope that he would bring a fresh viewpoint to campus.

"I'm excited that [the lecture] presents an alternate perspective from what is more often presented on our campus," Krochmal said.

Sophomore communication studies and theatre major Brandy Tutein said she enjoyed the lecture because it was a unique presentation on the topic.

"I've heard a lot about diversity before and I thought it was going to be a lot of the same rhetoric I've heard over and over again... but I learned a lot more than I expected to," Tutein said.

Programs like CRES are implemented in hopes of starting difficult discussions like those Camarillo repeatedly urged students to engage in.

Chief Inclusion Officer Darron Turner said lectures should not be seen as the sole answer to creating an inclusive campus, but they are a catalyst for these uncomfortable conversations.

"We have to be careful we don't see lectures as the answer," Turner said. "I think it is one of the solutions in terms of getting people to have a conversation with each other."

Turner said tackling these discussions is one of the biggest obstacles TCU still faces in terms of diversity and inclusion.

BASEBALL

It's unanimous: TCU Baseball No. 1

By GARRETT PODELL
STAFF WRITER

With the No. 1 preseason ranking for 2017, expectations for the Horned Frogs are clear: return to the College World Series in Omaha and bring home the crown.

Head coach Jim Schlossnagle said the team's position is enviable, but complicated.

"You've got two options when those things come along: you can not talk about it and run away from it, or as the Cubs did this past year, you can embrace it," Schlossnagle said.

The Chicago Cubs, whose starting rotation includes former Horned Frog Jake Arrieta, broke a 108-year championship drought last October. A college World Series win would be a first for the Frogs.

"We kind of stole something from the Cubs. We're going to embrace the target," pitcher Brian Howard said.

Much of last year's team is back, including eight everyday position players and nine pitchers - the entire weekend rotation, their left-handed setup arm and closer. The recruiting class is led by left-handed pitcher Nick Lodolo, who was selected with the No. 41 pick in the 2016 draft by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Howard's return gives Schlossnagle options with the starting rotation.

"Obviously Howard, Jared Janczak, Mitchell Traver will be in competition for the rotation, and we have three freshmen that we really like: Lodolo, Charles King, and Nick Eisler," Schlossnagle said. "That's six guys for four spots, and we'll let them compete over the next two-and-a-half weeks."

Two of TCU's top hitters, catcher Evan Skoug and first baseman/Luken Baker agree predicted batters will have the most trouble with: Jared Janczak.

"Jared is a guy who can go 92-93 with a lot of sink, really good change and breaking balls," Skoug said.

Baker added: "Jared is the hardest to bat against for me because his sinker/slider combo is something that gets a lot of us most of the time."

Schlossnagle said he's expecting Sean Wymer to step up this season. "We didn't lose a lot of pitching, but Brian Trieglaff and Preston Guillory threw some big innings for us, and Sean I think can pick up some of that load."

Sophomore closer Durbin Feltman is back. He led the Frogs with nine saves in nine save opportunities, while throwing 49 strikeouts and just nine walks to go along with a 1.56 ERA in 34.2 innings pitched. Feltman held opponents scoreless in 24 of 27 appearances.

"Durbin can just overpower you with high 90's fastballs and good breaking balls," Skoug said.

As for the TCU offense, Schlossnagle preached versatility.

"We don't want to be categorized in one particular way offensively, because we want to be able to steal bases, if you're great at holding runners, then we'll hit and run, and we have guys that can hit the ball out of the ballpark," Schlossnagle said. "We have power guys, speed guys, right-handed hitters, left-handed hitters, one-switch hitter, and if they can stay healthy, it should be a very fun offense to watch and that can excite you in a variety of ways."

Baker led the team in batting average, hitting .379 and hitting 11 homers.

Nolan Brown returns to the field after a hand injury forced him to take a medical red-shirt in 2016.

"He's a guy who can hit it out of the ballpark, and he's as good of a pure base-stealer as Cody Jones was for us, so if we get on base enough in our offense he can steal 40-plus bases, even 50," Schlossnagle said.

He said defense is what will separate his club from the rest of the competition.

"Everyone likes to talk about our pitching and offense that's sexy, but the defense is what's going to carry us," Schlossnagle said.

Defensively, TCU will line up with Skoug at catcher, Baker splitting time at first base and the designated hitter spot with Connor Wanhannen, Cam Warner at second base, Ryan Merrill at shortstop, Austen Wade in right field, Brown in center field, and Josh Watson in left field.

"Josh is going to hit in the middle of our lineup, and we'd like to see him cut down on strikeouts a little bit, but there's a give and take with his power," Schlossnagle said.

Baker will play defense after exclusively pitching or batting as a designated hitter in 2016.

"Luken is going to play some first base, no doubt about it, and it's important he's a good first baseman for us No. 1, and No. 2 so he can prove to Major League Baseball that he can play a position, and he can," Schlossnagle said.

Players and coaches alike are locked in and ready for opening day.

"This is one of my favorite days of the year, and I can't wait to start this journey," Skoug said.

TCU's first series is Feb. 17-19 against the Penn State Nittany Lions at Lupton Baseball Stadium. First pitch on the 17th is set for 6:30 p.m.

Luken Baker takes first base for the 2017 baseball season

By GARRETT PODELL
STAFF WRITER

When TCU Baseball takes the field on opening night against Penn State on Feb. 17, TCU preseason All-American Luken Baker will be trying on a new role.

The sophomore pitched and batted as a designated hitter last year, but head coach Jim Schlossnagle sees Baker as one of his everyday fielders.

"Luken is going to play some first base, no doubt about it, and he'll play out there a lot," Schlossnagle said.

In 2016, Baker was named an All-American for his pitching and hitting. As a pitcher, he went 3-1 with 1.70 ERA, while striking out 41 batters and walking just 16 in 47.2 innings. On the days he didn't pitch, he was the Frogs designated hitter. Baker hit a team-high .379 batting average, co-lead the team in home runs with 11, and led the team in RBIs with

This season Baker is honing his skills as a position player.

"It's important he's a good first baseman No. 1, and No. 2 he can prove to Major League Baseball that he can play a position and he can," Schlossnagle said.

Baker said, "Sometimes it gets a little boring when you're team is out there in the field and you're sitting there. I'm excited to get out there and play some first base."

Senior pitcher Brian Howard returns to the mound after turning down a chance in the majors for one last go around with the Horned Frogs.

Howard, a 2017 preseason All-American, said he hopes to make the most of his decision to stay true to his school.

By putting Major League Baseball on hold, Howard said he hopes to be part of TCU's first College World Series championship.

"I can't wait to start this journey," Howard said. "We're focused on writing our 2017 story and getting the young guys acclimated, so we can make this year the best out of all of them."

"I can't wait to start this journey."

BRIAN HOWARD
SENIOR PITCHER

Howard's had a strong career at TCU. As a true freshman, he appeared in nine games as a reliever, throwing a 2.77 ERA with 14 strikeouts and 10 walks. The Horned Frogs went well above average when Howard took the mound in 2014: TCU was 7-2 in games Howard pitched.

As a sophomore, Howard went 4-0, throwing a 3.52 ERA with 46 strikeouts and 14 walks in 46 innings.

Last year he had a regular spot in TCU's starting rotation. Howard thrived, posting a 10-2 record while throwing 3.19 ERA with 93 strikeouts and 30 walks in 98.2 innings pitched. His 10 wins were the most on the team.

Major League Baseball took notice. Howard was drafted in the 17th round by the Houston Astros last summer, but elected to stay with the Frogs for another year.

"Obviously, a dream of mine is to play Major League Baseball, and an organization like the Astros would've been a great fit," Howard said. "Once I thought about everything this university has done for me and everything that I owe this university as far as making me into a better person on and off the field, it was really easy to come back and give my senior year to this university."

Horoscope

A baby born today has a Sun in Aquarius and a Moon in Virgo.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Feb. 12, 2017:

This year you are more likely to dream and have that dream become a reality. You have the ability to act on different possibilities. Your childlike side often emerges, which creates more excitement. Others are drawn to you, as you certainly are not boring to be around. If you are single, you will have your share of suitors all year long. You'll need to figure out what type of relationship you want. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy each other's company, but you don't always agree. You have very different types of desires, yet the attraction between you remains strong and valid. Accept your difference. VIRGO can be very fussy.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Emotional extremes run parallel with misunderstandings. You will be forthright about what you desire. Others might need to adapt to whatever you request. Those who care will adjust accordingly. Tonight: Mentally prepare yourself for tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ You can make a difference, if you so choose. A loved one might try to manipulate you. Remain aware of your needs. You see life from a totally different perspective. Try to explain where you are coming from. Tonight: Ever playful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Try to understand what is happening with a close friend or family member, if possible. You might prefer to be concerned with other matters involving your friends or a professional situation, but still give this person your time and attention. Tonight: Stay anchored.

Carpe Diem by Niklas Eriksson

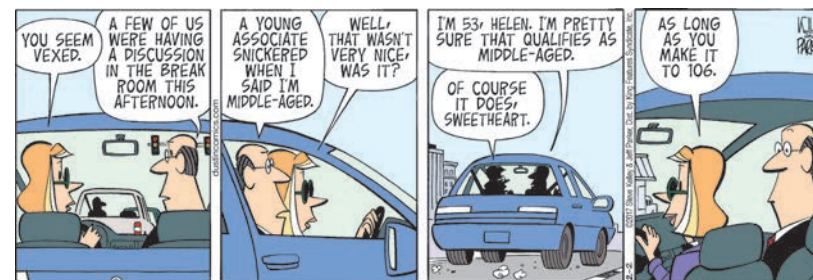

Tonight: Take some much-needed personal time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Your ability to resist someone's charm becomes obvious. You might believe that you know what a loved one wants, but perhaps it is just reflective of your own desires on a deeper level. Be more open to what this person says he or she needs. Tonight: Hang out with a friend.

Dustin by Steve Kelley and Jeff Parker

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ You have a strong sense of direction that takes you down a new path. Honor a need for a fast change. How you approach a key person in your life might change once you see him or her in a different setting. Update your perspective. Tonight: On top of your game.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Evaluate what is happening around a particular issue. You might want to head in a new direction, take an educational course and/or do some traveling. Explore different ways of approaching life. Remain sensitive to the potential of a bond. Tonight: Speak your mind.

Intelligent Life by David Reddick

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Ask questions, and think more fully about what needs to happen. A loved one might want to go off to the movies, whereas you'd prefer to hang out at home and have an early dinner. Can you mix the two? Learn to compromise. Tonight: Speak your mind, but remain diplomatic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Your ability to make a difference in someone's life is apparent. However, a problem involving your finances could emerge. You might find this person's demands difficult to meet under the circumstances. Explain the issue as clearly as possible. Tonight: Among the crowds.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You might be more empowered than you realize. Think twice about what is happening between you and someone else. You could feel as if this person is pushing the line when dealing with you. Put your best foot forward, and enjoy the moment. Tonight: All smiles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★ You might be working through a problem and could want some time to yourself. You know that a restrictive situation will not work for you. Say little until you are absolutely sure about how you are going to approach the issue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ You'll break past someone's need to control you by demonstrating a willingness to work with this person on more of an individual level. You have a greater sense of what you would like to see develop from this relationship. Tonight: Opt for dinner out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ You are extremely social and quite willing to go in your own direction, if need be. A partner might want to do something a certain way. If you can go along with this person's request, do. Be open to his or her suggestions and ideas. Tonight: Be yourself, and stay present.
