Doctors are gearing up to give shots only, because U.S. health officials say the easy-to-use nasal spray version of the vaccine isn't working as well as a jab.

Flu bug hits campus

By BRANDON KITCHIN
LINE EDITOR, TCU 360

Not even two weeks into classes and the flu has already made its way around campus. As of Tuesday, there were 59 confirmed cases of the flu at TCU, according to the TCU Health Center.

Kelle Tillman, associate director of the health center, said about 1,600 flu vaccines – which are free to faculty, students and staff – have been administered on campus so far by the health center and the Harris College of Nursing. Flu shots are also available at pharmacies such as Tom Thumb, Kroger, Albertsons, CVS and Walgreens.

Tillman said ways to prevent getting sick include increasing efforts to keep common areas clean, using good hygiene and watching the way you and others cough and sneeze.

Junior chemistry major Gianna Mejia works at the Kroger Pharmacy. She said she is lucky she isn't sick after being around people with the flu getting treatment. She said once the pharmacy sent out an email saying they were giving out shots, people started coming in.

"It came as a real shock when people started showing up with symptoms," Mejia said. "Flu season typically starts in October. Usually, we're prepared with all the typical medications for the flu when the time comes around, but since it came so early, we were wiped clean."

Grant Garvin, a senior communication studies major, said he got sick the weekend before school started and missed two days of school.

"It was definitely tough to be able to keep up with classes and to try not to get behind in classes, but fortunately I'm not behind," Garvin said.

After going to classes Monday and Tuesday, he went to the Health Center and was diagnosed with the flu.

He said the Health Center told him to stay home until he was able to go a full day without running a fever. It took him two days of rest. Garvin said he received the flu vaccination earlier in the year.

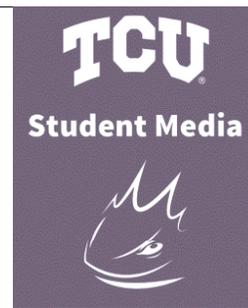

Students were advised to seek a healthcare provider if they begin to experience flu-like symptoms in a campuswide email from medical director of the Health Center, Jane Torgerson, on Friday, Aug. 25. Symptoms include fever, cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose, body aches, headache, chills, feeling tired and sometimes vomiting and diarrhea.

Students who have a fever over 101°F are advised to isolate themselves and avoid going to class for 24 hours to help prevent spreading sickness.

Tillman also shot down the longtime campuswide rumor a certain percentage of students getting sick would shut down the university. No rule exists.

The TCU Health Center is providing free vaccines to students, faculty and staff this week. For more information, call the Health Center at 817-257-7940 or visit the Tarrant County Public Health website.

Student organizes protest of Trump's decision not to renew DACA

By TAMERA HYATTE

LINE EDITOR, TCU 360

A TCU student organized a protest to defend Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals Wednesday afternoon in response to President Donald Trump's decision not to renew the program.

DACA, which was an executive order signed by former President Barack Obama, was a program that protected young undocumented immigrants from deportation.

Mayra Guardiola, a graduate student in the English department, said she organized this protest because her family is affected by the decision to end the program.

About 130 people came to Wednesday's protest. Many individuals created signs.

"I mostly just wanted to let people know, in our TCU community especially, that someone is there for them," she said, "and that they belong here and that I won't stop fighting for them because they're my family."

The protest started at the Founder's Statue and ended in front of Sadler Hall where students and faculty made speeches on the steps.

The protest consisted of about 130 people.

Protesters carried signs and chanted 'Si Se Puede' as well as other chants during the march.

Several faculty and students spoke out about the DACA decision in front of Sadler Hall after the march ended.

Guardiola said she was not expecting such a big turnout for the protest.

"It's hard to describe the feeling knowing that so many people have your back and that your professors care and that your peers care and that they would stand up for you if push came to shove," she said.

Guardiola said she plans to continue to speak out against the DACA decision.

"My main purpose is for the university to take an official stand to make all students here feel welcome and not vulnerable and in fear of getting their education," she said.

Store undergoes changes

By NICK STEPHENS
STAFF WRITER

If you enter the TCU Campus Store this semester, things may look a bit different than you remember.

Follett Higher Education Group acquired the store last year and renovated the interior, the layout and the merchandise.

“It just has a more modern feel,” the store’s operations manager Sarah Wright said. “We kind of wanted to put our touch on it since we took over a year ago.”

There is new flooring on both levels, new fixtures, a fresh coat of paint and a redesigned entry to better match the architectural style on campus. They also updated the store’s layout and purpose.

“I think we have a much stronger Nike presence in the new remodel, which was something that we were going for,” said Wright.

Wright said they added dressing rooms, expanded the information desk on the upper level and added three checkout registers, taking the total from five registers to eight.

Wright said she believes all three additions will greatly enhance the in-store experience for students.

The TCU Campus Store is located at 2950 W. Berry St. on the corner of Berry and University Drive. The store is open seven days a week, with slightly shortened hours Saturdays and Sundays.

Koehler Center finds new home

By HUNTER SMITH
STAFF WRITER

The Koehler Center has moved its labs from Winton-Scott Hall to the TCU Campus Store as a part of the store’s renovation.

The center offers services to help professors enhance their teaching methods and adopt new classroom technology.

The idea to move the center to the bookstore was part of the initial renovation conversation because the center needed more space.

“The place we have in Winton-Scott is a wonderful lab, and it’s done us great favors for years,” said Romy Hughes, Koehler Center director for instruction, innovation and engagement. “But we have a greater need now and we have more faculty adopting new technology, so we need a space that could hold a larger audience.”

The new space will accommodate more people, cutting down on the number of workshops necessary in a semester.

The Koehler Center will still use the old room in Winton-Scott Hall, room 108, as a conference room and for consultations.

Hughes said every Monday through Friday the new space in the store will be an open lab available for faculty to seek assistance. The new location is somewhat limited to the store’s hours of operation.

“If they have any events that want to go late into the evening, we’ll work together to make sure we have someone here to open that up and make sure it’s accessible,” store director Jason Smith said.

Horoscope

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Opportunities seem to pop up. Extremes mark your plans, decisions and day. You are far more direct than you normally are. Be willing to express your thoughts directly. Someone is clearly interested. Listen to his or her feedback. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ You obviously have something or someone on your mind. Share your thoughts, and you'll get positive feedback. You have more supportive people around you than you originally thought. Remain caring with a relative who might be withdrawn. Tonight: Some matters must be kept hush-hush.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ Reach out for someone you care about. A meeting or get-together could draw some of your friends together. You might feel far more confident with this group. You trust that their comments are authentic. Be as direct as possible. Tonight: Let your hair down.

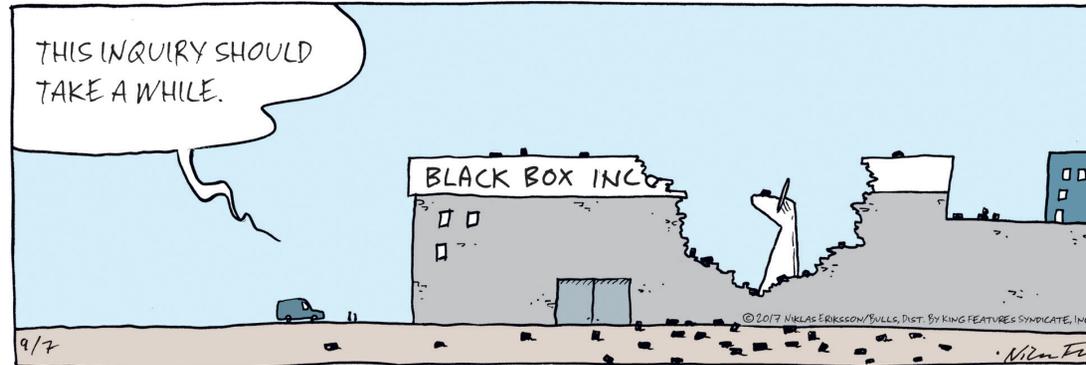

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★★ Reach out for someone at a distance or an expert who openly shares his or her thoughts with you. Question which way to go. Do you want to blaze a new path? What would you prefer to do? Recognize you can only control so much of what is going on and might need to let go. Tonight: Try out a new spot.

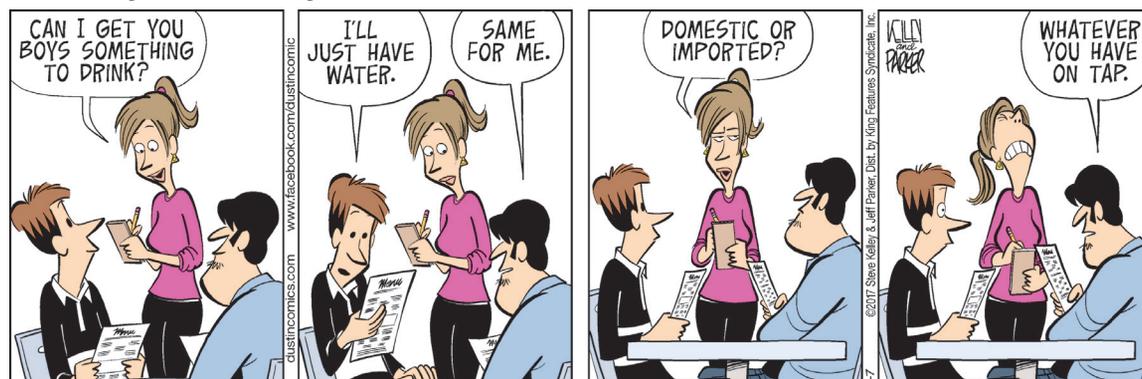

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Stretch and do whatever you must to get past an immediate problem. How you see a personal matter could change as a result. Perhaps you got stuck in a perspective. Recognize what is happening with a child or loved one.

Carpe Diem by Niklas Eriksson

Dustin by Steve Kelley and Jeff Parker

Intelligent Life by David Reddick

Tonight: Relax to a movie.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ A key person in your life knows what he or she wants. This person could become pushy without intending to. Do you know exactly what you desire in the same vein? You cannot proceed if you don't know or are willing to defer. Be aware there is no lack of caring between you and this person. Tonight: Make plans for the weekend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Defer to others. They appreciate being able to make the choices. In some way, they will reveal more of themselves, and you will see their caring toward you. You have the ability to charm nearly anyone into agreeing with your choices. Try not to interfere with someone's process. Tonight: Continue letting others take the lead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ A creative person or associate spouts ideas left and right. You might not be able to absorb these ideas with ease at the moment. Express your appreciation. Meanwhile, clear out what you must do. Once you do, you can participate in what is going on around you. Tonight: Off to the gym.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Listen to your inner voice when dealing with a child or loved one. Your fiery side encourages more openness. As a result, you'll gain a great deal of insight into the other party. Let go of a sense of caution when dealing with this person. Tonight: Go with adventure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You have the capability to handle whatever comes up. You could be in a position where you need to have a conversation without triggering. You might want to see another perspective, because when you do, you will naturally find a solution. Tonight: Head home early.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Don't stand on ceremony. You will get past a situation if you stay open. Listen, and you will learn a lot more about the person and his or her needs. Keep communication flowing. You could hear from a close family member. Tonight: Speak your mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ You can communicate your bottom line and others will remain responsive. You also must extend the same courtesy. A partner or close friend clearly enjoys getting together with you. Make plans as soon as possible. Your efforts count. Tonight: Buy a new item for your home or wardrobe.

Horned Frogs head to Arkansas with last season's loss firmly in the past

By BRANSON NELSON
STAFF WRITER

One year ago this week, Arkansas edged TCU 41-38 in double overtime. The Horned Frogs get their chance to return the favor Saturday in Fayetteville.

The loss was a turning point in TCU's worst season since 2013, but senior wide receiver John Diarse said none of that carries over.

"It's a different team on both sides," Diarse said. "It's not really about last year, but what we can do to be better this year."

Since last season, Arkansas has promoted former Iowa State head coach Paul Rhoads to defensive coordinator. He has changed to a 3-4 defense.

"They are running similar to what Iowa State has been doing," senior offensive lineman Austin Schlottmann said. "I've been looking at some Iowa State film to try and see what they are doing."

Patterson said Arkansas' personnel fits the new three linemen, four linebackers and four defensive-back scheme.

"They have guys that can run around on defense," Patterson said. "They like [the 3-4] for the people they are going to play as far as passing groups. It keeps leverages and you don't have to take on as many double teams in the scheme."

TCU quarterback Kenny Hill scrambles out of the pocket to run the ball against Arkansas.

Diarse said the new scheme does not alter the traditional expectations of a strong defense from the Razorbacks. He said he and his teammates will go and play their game and trust the coaches have put them in a situation to succeed.

"It's Arkansas, they play hard from the first whistle to the last whistle," Diarse said. "On film, their secondary is just as aggressive as their up front, and that's what you expect out of their defense."

An SEC atmosphere shouldn't be a problem for TCU, who went 4-1 in away games last season.

"Every Thursday, we go in the indoor and we blare music so loud that you can't hear," Patterson said. "They have to communicate without talking, defense and offense."

Offensively, Arkansas has a three-headed monster of players at tailback. A full stable of running backs is the norm for the Razorbacks.

Patterson said his defense has its work cut out for it because Arkansas has a deep playbook that will challenge the Frogs in a variety of ways.

The Razorbacks and Horned Frogs will take the field in Fayetteville Saturday at 2:30 p.m. on CBS.
